Spelling Change I'll read a base word and tell you the ending I want. For example, I might say story with the ending s. You would tell me the word is stories.

Dear Family Member:

The story we are reading this week, The Blind Hunter, is set in Africa. It is about Chirobo, a blind man, who lives in a small village. Chirobo is kind and wise. He asks to go hunt with Muteye, a man who has come to the village. At first the hunter says no, but then agrees when Chirobo says he can see in other ways. I would like to know how Chirobo can do this. As I read, the author will give me hints that I can use to draw conclusions about Chirobo and about Muteye.

This Week's Skills

Lindy's mother tells her one of three lights has blown out in the basement because they have all been on for quite a time. On her way down the cellar stairs, Lindy flips the switch by mistake, turning all the lights off. How can Lindy tell which light bulb needs changing?

Answers: a pound of feathers and a pound of gold weigh the same; Lindy can touch the bulbs—the ones that were on will still be hot.

Queridos familiares:

El relato que estamos leyendo esta semana, The Blind Hunter, tiene lugar en África. Trata de Chirobo, un ciego, que vive en un pequeño pueblo. Chirobo es bueno y generoso. Quiere ir a cazar con Muteye, un hombre que no vive en el pueblo. Al principio el cazador se niega, pero después acepta cuando Chirobo dice que él puede ver de otra manera. Me gustaría saber lo que puede hacer Chirobo. Mientras leo, el autor me va a dar pistas que podré usar para sacar conclusiones sobre Chirobo y sobre Muteye.
